“ Tyrell was the first real friend I had when I moved here from Washington, DC in Jr. High. The first week at Woodrow Wilson school she immediately had my back the day some kids picked on the new kid, which was me. From then on, we became good buddies. The day we graduated 8th grade, we both showed up with identical long blue dresses. Everyone thought we had shopped together, but we hadn't. We just liked the same things and had the same taste. We both played on the Woodrow Wilson basketball team. We ended up going to different high schools, but managed to keep in touch here and there. We lost track of each other for many years. I saw her at an Ameren Illinois event 3 years ago. She remembered me and my name. She was so excited to remember who I was. I never knew what had happened to her, but prayed for her in hopes that she would call me after that special day of her life. I am sorry to hear of her passing, but from the obituary, I see she was in a lot of pain. RIP my good friend. Until we meet again in God's time. Hugs to you, Tyrell. I am sure you are playing basketball up there in heaven, maybe even wearing those same blue shirts, we wore, with the big gold smiley face on them!

Peace,
